We can arrange everything from romantic afternoon teas and relaxing spa days to family fun activities and outdoor adventures. If you've got tickets to a concert or sporting event, we'll sort out all the details so you can relax and focus on commemorating your trip.

On our trip to Ireland, I arranged to propose with the aid of a hawk at Dromoland Castle. My (now) wife was so focused on the hawk soaring through the trees and landing on her glove she didn't even notice the ring dangling below until the falconer nudged her to look at what it was carrying. It was such a great moment for the both of us. Her face was priceless, her expression and tears of joy said a thousand words. It was truly special and only possible with the help of Brendan.

Linking our past to our present is the beating heart of what we do. Meet amazing people ready to share their stories, passions and pride and visit places frozen in time, preserved through care and ready for insightful exploration.

We'll bring you the best of it through unique encounters with Local Specialists, enigmatic artisans, producers, pioneers and other custodians of our culture to give you the most authentic Celtic experiences.

Historical humour

If there's two things Ireland & Scotland have in abundance, it's historical sites and a hearty sense of hilarity. 'Castles and craic' if you will. Here, it's almost a certainty at birth to possess the 'gift of the gab'. The uncanny ability to tell a great tale, present facts and details in engaging ways and put the 'story' in history. This skill is what sets our storytellers apart and no matter where you visit, or who you meet, they'll have you hanging on every anecdote and likely, howling with laughter.

Our country has one of the best histories in the world and you feel it as you walk around. It's happening and changing all the time and when we see it come alive through the eyes of our guests, it truly becomes a joy for us, as much as it is for them.

Traditional breadmaking with Tracey Jeffery

A few years ago I hosted a couple on my tour and we had the best craic. The following year they came back with their siblings, the next year with their children and then the year after that they added their cousins. We would laugh about how the group kept getting bigger every year, until finally we reached over a hundred people when they decided to celebrate their daughter's wedding in Galway (which I was delighted to get an invite to). It's been so lovely to have that friendship blossom into a family and to think that it all started over a bite to eat just shows the power food has in making lasting connections.

The 19th hole

Golf is a game of traditions. One of our favourites is the fabled 19th hole. They say golf can be the best way to ruin a good walk... so if your round was more bogey than birdie, enjoying a different type of round (or two) at a course-adjacent lounge or local pub to end your day is always a good idea.

The rails run on time, are clean and comfortable and are a great way to see the countryside. The Brendan hosts were exceptional. Friendly and outgoing, it was great fun just to sit and talk with them, but they also bent over backwards to make everything run smoothly. They had all the info on costs and times and just how to do everything. Our experiences both collectively and singularly were fantastic, even the transfer drivers offered a lot of local insights! All in all, this was a fabulous trip. I wish we'd had a few more weeks!

This dedication is apparent in their 14 year-old single malt, that is among the six classic malts of Scotland.
